

Further Down the Road

Written by Meagan K. Pledger

©2010

She's spent hours praying, and her knees are aching now. Her hands are cold from being clasped in an unwarmed winter house. But the money for the power isn't there to pay, and it won't be there tomorrow, or the day after that day.

Her pantry's kind of barren, and her kid's clothes are worn thin. But her faith in God's deliverance hasn't wavered one bit. Cuz she stands on a promise that she received some time ago, and she knows that her salvation is just a little further down the road.

Just a little further down the road, God's promises will be fulfilled and brought to fruition. Just a little further down the road I know that I will see that his promises will be just a little further down the road

When the outlook turns bleak and the possibilities few, that's when faith in Jesus will always see you through, because the faithful have a promise that is theirs and theirs alone, and it says that He will never leave you alone.