

Surviving the Sale

Selling a home can sometimes be a long, stressful, and costly process. Like anything, though, equipping yourself with the right tools and the right knowledge can eliminate a great number of the potential negative aspects of the process – and get you the maximum return on your investment.

Your Team

The importance of having the right help in the selling process cannot be overstated. Having a good Castle Keepers Realtor® on your side, not only to assist you in making decisions and getting your home marketed, but also simply in terms of having an advocate in the process, is the single most important step you can take to reduce your stress.

The first step in selling any home should be to arrange to get Comparative Market Analyses for your home. Castle Keepers is happy to provide a CMA free of charge and without any obligation on your part. Many sellers take this step, but what they do with the information they receive is not always in their best interest.

Once you have the CMA, sit down with your Castle Keepers Realtor and discuss all of the comparable houses in your subdivision, and how they are different from yours. Usually some have more improvements and some have less. Use these discussions to get a feel for the relative value of your house to come to a sound decision about pricing. Once you've hired your Castle Keepers Realtor®, he or she should introduce you to an Interior Designer to help you stage your house, an Inspector to find out what should be fixed before an offer comes in, and have it fixed to minimize price reductions by the Buyer once you agree to a sales price, and Movers, who can give you quotes so you will have an idea what it will cost to move. Depending on your circumstances and needs, your Castle Keepers Realtor® can make other referrals to help you.

Ask your Castle Keepers Realtor® questions about his or her experience in the business. Get a good feeling that your personalities will work well together. Remember, the Castle Keepers Realtor is asking these questions in his or her mind about you to ensure a compatible working relationship can be achieved. This will help your home sell faster.

Your Goals

Goal #1: Make lots of money.

Most sellers fail to move beyond goal #1, and that can cause some problems. Another important goal that should be recognized is the attempt to minimize stress. Will getting an extra percentage or two for your home be worth the inconvenience of having it on the market for an extra month? Two months? Your priorities are your own, of course, but sometimes sellers underestimate the stress that having their home on the market for an extended period can generate. Constant showings, constant interruptions, and concerns about selling your home before buying its replacement are not minor concerns – each can have a major impact on your life.

Sit down and discuss just where you place the most importance in the selling process. If profit is your only priority, perhaps you can afford to be firmer in your asking price, and can reject offers that are less than ideal. Most sellers who have had their home on the market for an extended period of time, though, would agree that the few extra dollars were not worth it in the end.

Your Trust

The correlative to assembling a strong team is putting your trust in that team.

Few people would second-guess their heart surgeon and insist they could do a better job themselves, or question whether their lawyer's knowledge of the law is more extensive than their own, but when it comes to selling a home, many homeowners find it difficult to put their faith in the knowledge of their Realtor® fully.

For example, despite the fact that studies show that less than 1% of homes are sold through open houses, many homeowners insist their Realtor® hold one. Indeed, if a yard sign and an open house were all it took to sell a home, there wouldn't be many Realtors® at all!

If you've put the right Castle Keepers team in place, put your trust in that team. Castle Keepers Realtors® have access to many highly-advanced marketing strategies that you may not even realize are being utilized.

It is your Castle Keepers Realtor's® job to bring qualified buyers to the table – and keep in mind that he or she likely does not get paid at all if your house doesn't sell! In most markets, the combination of the right representative and the right listing price will result in a sold home. If you recognize this early on, it becomes much easier to take a step back from the process, let your professional representative market your home, and minimize your stress.

Don't hesitate to speak up if you think that things are not progressing as they should, but likewise, don't hesitate to sit back and be comfortable in the knowledge that the sale of your home is being handled well by your Castle Keepers Realtor®.
