

Betty Soo may well have the most gorgeous voice in Texas at the moment, if not in all contemporary folk.

Its purity and strength can be downright devastating when shined through the prism of songs from her deeply moving When We're Gone. The rest of her catalog is just as rich – and varied, with Little Tiny Secrets flashing a sense of humor as wicked as the true grit that characterized Gurf Morlix-produced Heat Sin Water Skin. ~ Acoustic Guitar Magazine
