

Singer songwriters Marlo and Mark Announce the Release of Second Album, “Brighter Days”

February 11, 2021--FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

NAPLES, FL – With a goal of inspiring hope, singer songwriters, Marlo and Mark, have released their second album, “Brighter Days,” just a year after releasing their first album, “Clarity.”

The prolific artists said they were initially going to title the new album after a different song, but given the state of the world, they felt “Brighter Days” delivered a message of optimism and encouraged positive connections between people.

“All of our songs are derived from life,” said Marlo Hower, lyricist and singer. “They are stories from our lives or those we know. There are 11 songs on this album that range from quarantine humor to current social distress. We feel that every one of our songs will be relatable to those who listen.”

One of the songs, “For Our Daughters and Sons,” shares a compelling message for social unity. “We think it’s timely and relevant,” said Mark Minges, guitarist and composer. “As adults, we need to come together, set a better example for our children.”

Due to the Covid-19 pandemic, the duo recorded the album in Mark’s home studio. Once the initial music and vocal tracks were recorded, they were sent to Michael Graham at The Lodge Studio in Indianapolis for mixing and mastering. Musician Kara Day, a long-time friend of Mark’s, agreed to create violin tracks for all of the songs on the album.

“This second year of working together on original music has allowed Mark and I to develop a great collaborative groove,” Marlo said. “We wanted this album to show how we have grown as artists and songwriters.”

You can find their music on YouTube, all streaming platforms and download services such as Amazon Music. They hope their songs might also be recorded by other artists or picked up by music supervisors for use in movies, documentaries or television.

“The year 2020 gave us plenty of songwriting material, as well as ample time to spend on lyrics, melodies and music,” Marlo said.
