

Prairie-raised, Canadian folk-pop Americana artist Angela Saini is all about second chances and empowering others. With several European and Canadian tours under her belt, Angela is a 2017 Toronto Independent Music Award Winner and BBC Radio has called her “massively talented.”

Angela goes back to her roots with new album “Hope on the Stereo.” Exploring themes of hope and fear, and the shades in between, bring out her life-affirming perspective on life, but through a different lens, choosing to celebrate the cracks and vulnerabilities that lie beneath the surface. Her early influences like the folk stylings and power of storyteller Ani DiFranco, meet the country influence of being born and raised in Alberta with first love Dolly Parton. Sprinkle in 10 years of living in Toronto since moving east with her first high school band, and the result is “rich, inviting and catchy.” (Life with More Cowbell)

With a recent showcase during Eurosonic in The Netherlands and tour dates booked well into 2020, Angela is poised to live by example. Empowerment and uncertainty can coexist; the road may be untraveled, but you’ll never know if you don’t take a chance.

“Radiates positivity.” Infectious Magazine

“Instantly memorable and delightful.” Music Life Magazine

Track Listing:

Look What I Found (3:59)
Black Sheep (2:28)
Break Down Walls (3:32)
My Once Upon a Time (3:50)
The Shine in My Star (3:43)
Where Do I Begin (4:00)
Handrail (3:57)

Artist Contact: Angela Saini
angela@angelasaini.com
(416) 806-9667

