Multi-Instrumentalist Jazz Composer

Multi-instrumentalist producer who developed a signature sound that melded live jazz arrangements with inventive electronic production.

Bio

Multi-instrumentalist jazz composer Tadric Jermaine's signature production sound came from a lifelong love of music and a vision that blended mastery of live instruments with deft digital production techniques.

Style

Born in Saginaw, Michigan, Jermaine began tirelessly studying jazz while still in grade school, concentrating all of his efforts into becoming a better player and eventually becoming proficient on multiple instruments. While playing in bands and doing various local gigs throughout high school, he was also learning more about sample-based music and recording techniques, eventually getting into producing his own tracks as well as engineering recordings for other artists.

Debut Record - "MMIII" | #1 Billboard Jazz Album

Jermaine's solo debut came with 2017's MMIII, a collection of jazz-inflected instrumentals that showcased his knack for saxophone, inventive basslines, and electronic music production.
